wide variety of texts interesting enough to be read by children and adults simultaneously. Several narratives belonging to this category was taken up in class for preserving the lively spirit within the class. The English department teachers delivered student- friendly bilingual lectures on English and Indian English Children's literary texts. References were drawn from ancient Indian texts like the Panchatantra to highlight the importance of works for children in Indian culture as well. The concept of the evolution of the child as a reader in response to adult literary texts was also taken into account. Various modes of representation like the adventure narratives, the science fiction, the gothic, the mysterious etc were considered for discussion. Special attention was given to the sub genres of Comics and Graphic Novels with textual references to substantiate the subtle difference between the two. Popular works for children like that of Satyajit Ray was also an interesting area of study in this Course.

The students were made to submit assignments based on which they were evaluated and certified as active participants of the Course. This Course will chart a different territory for conducting Research works by the interested students as the underlying theoretical issues along with their politics of representation which could be seen to function in many literary narratives meant for children were also raised but unresolved in this Course. Students were curious to know more about this genre and it was a highly successful event organized by the English Department of this institution.

It was an intra-College but inter- departmental program arranged to give a better idea of the chosen sub- genre of Literature. Besides the teachers of the English Department, Dr. Suman Mukherjee, the Head of the Department of History of this institution was invited to deliver a speech on a relevant theme suitable for the topic.

The Course was divided into eight days of four hours each. Some days had two sessions by two different speakers scheduled according to the module to avoid the monotony of the Course. The students were introduced about the origin, history and development of this unique genre of the English Novel which can actually accommodate a wide variety of texts interesting enough to be read by all kind of readers. The various precursory sub- genres responsible for the rise of the novel were discussed by the speakers to expand the horizon of their understanding about the genre. Since they are made to read a number of novels in their Undergraduate Course, a thorough knowledge about the pre- existing literary and non- literary pieces of writing promoting the growth of the genre of the novel was an interesting way to deal with the genre itself. The socio-cultural history of England was also discussed by the invited speaker with special emphasis on the eighteenth century England. A number of authors like Daniel Defoe, Samuel Richardson, Henry Fielding, Laurence Sterne, which are not included were also discussed for their contribution to the genre.

The students were made to submit assignments based on which they were evaluated and certified as active participants of the Course. This Course charted a different territory for conducting Research works by the interested students as the underlying theoretical issues along with their politics of representation which could be seen to function in many novels were also raised but unresolved in this Course. “Basics of Geoinformatics”

In the academic session of 2018-2019, the teachers of the Department of Geography of Turku Hansda Lapsa Hemram Mahavidyalay organized an Add-on Certificate Course on the topic of “Basics of Geoinformatics” from 04/04/2019 to 13/04/2019 (32 Hours) including two session every day. The course was overseen by the Principal and guided by the Coordinator of the Internal Quality Assurance Cell. In addition to the instructors from the geography department, many speakers from the various institutions were invited to discuss the basics concepts of Geoinformatics.

A total of 38 students from the second and fourth semesters participated in the course. In addition to submitting assignments based on the knowledge they had learned from the course, students had to participate in a viva voce. Students received a certificate with their grade listed on it after completing the assignment and viva. Few participants obtained an A+ grade, most students received an A grade. Upon finishing the course, students will be able to independently carry out investigation and development work to solve real-life geospatial problems. They will also be able to write and present a substantial technical report/document/international level research article.
